FROM INSIGHT TO COLLABORATION

This 3-day intensive experiential workshop is for group facilitators and consultants who are committed to developing their group relations practice. The workshop is based on group relations methodology and centred around 4 key questions:

1. How can you offer insight that supports growth in teams?
2. How can you develop a containing presence “under fire”?
3. What is required to create collaboration in groups under pressure?
4. What personal learning and change is required for you to develop your GRC practice?

Each participant will have opportunities to take up a range of consulting roles. Events are designed to maximise opportunities for feedback and reflection.

The programme is designed to meet the needs of group relations facilitators and consultants who are interested in personal development and new perspectives, regardless of experience.

Dr Jo-anne Carlyle is a clinical and forensic psychologist, a psychoanalytic psychotherapist and organisational consultant. With group, clinical and research experience from settings as diverse as Broadmoor and Rampton Hospitals and the Tavistock Clinic, Jo-anne brings a commitment to understanding organisations communities that spans 30 years.

Chris Tanner is a leadership coach, organisational consultant and senior lecturer. He is Course Director of the MA Management and Organisational Dynamics (University of Essex Centre for Psychoanalytic Studies). He is also Cohort Director with the NHS Leadership Academy
